Dear Betty:

STAT I am looking forward to seeing  when she comes here to Washington. As you say, she seems to have interesting qualifications for the type of work we are doing. I am writing to some friends in New York and I think that you will be hearing from them in the near future. I appreciate your speaking to me about your interest in helping out.

Sincerely,

Dear Paul:-

It is a pleasure to write a personal note of introduction to you on behalf of [redacted] the bearer of this letter.

STAT

She left us because of a family problem now resolved, and after a year or so of idleness, she wishes to return to constructive professional work.

It is because she felt the Ford Foundation might provide such an opportunity, and because I agreed, that I have written you this personal note.

With all kind regards,

Sincerely,

(Signed) Harry

Dear Allen:

This will first of all introduce [redacted] of whom I spoke to you on the phone and who is making an appointment through your secretary to see you in Washington next week.

STAT

STAT We have known [redacted] and her family for many years and I think you will find her a person of unusual qualifications. Her long experience with Time-Life-Fortune and her personality together with her knowledge of German should make her of value to you.

In regard to myself, now that my boys are grown and away, and with the world situation as it is, I am anxious and ready to assume again the responsibility of serious full-time work. In considering the various fields in which one's work would also be a small contribution to the mutual effort, Intelligence naturally comes first to mind.

If there is to be a branch office here of CIA and if you think there would be any capacity in which I might be useful, I would be happy to be considered. Otherwise, I would appreciate it very much, indeed, if you would give me your advice as to the best channels to pursue and whom I might see.

I passed on to David your remarks about the reception of the American Neuremberg decisions and he was pleased. As he said the best part of it was the scarcity of reception!

With warm personal regards from us both,

Sincerely,
